++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Turning cooler for most, but still warm in the southwest.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud and patchy light rain or drizzle across Scotland and Northern Ireland moving southwards into England and Wales; the rain dying out. Mild in the southwest, else turning colder from the north with frost in northern Scotland.

Thursday:
Cloud across southern Scotland, Northern Ireland, Wales and central England tending to break to allow sunny spells. Sunny and very warm in the southwest, though breezy. Much cooler elsewhere.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Mostly dry with sunny spells and some overnight frost on Friday and Saturday. Becoming much colder and windy with rain then showers on Sunday, with showers turning increasingly wintry.
